To whom it may concern:

I am writing to express my deepest admiration and support for Stella Pavlides' tireless aspiration to help animals in need. Stella is a well-known individual in the realm of people with vitiligo. She has been tremendously and visibly active with the American Vitiligo Research Foundation. However, she has been equally hard at work behind the scenes to help animals who otherwise would not receive a helping hand. My first appointment with her was memorable. This vibrant and articulate lady with a big smile was holding an old growling Lakeland terrier with a basket muzzle. Zach was what we call a challenging patient. He had seen almost every specialty services by the time I was involved, and the record had "caution, will bite" written all over it. It is these animals, Stella will extend her love to. There were times she could not finance a repair of her motor vehicle, yet would bring Zach in for the care he needed. Stella is a true advocate for the speechless patients. Her selfless willingness to devote to an individual is commendable in its own right, Stella is attempting to help many other animals she does not even know. I applaud her.

Best regards,

Michael Kimura, DVM
